Morals – Marshmallows – Choices – and Prayer

Western Style Children's Character Learning to Do His Best in Order to Go to the Rodeo

Goshen, Indiana – Skillfully written and beautifully illustrated, Marlow by Cheryl Johnson is a gentle reminder of the values and choices we all face in life. Portrayed by the character of Marlow, the incredible marshmallow, and written in poetic prose for children, the story teaches and nourishes the body, mind and spirit of all its readers.

Easy to read and fun to enjoy with your children or grandchildren, this little one's book is sure to be an instant hit with all that read it. Its characters are vivid and detailed and the values taught by the author are priceless. Izabela Ciesinka, the graphic illustrator, has done a superb job of portraying Cheryl's sensitively developed characters that will delight anyone that receives a copy of this book. Izabela has taken the author's words and drawn the main characters of this tale in such a way that you feel as though you are right there with them enjoying life.

As you enjoy this children's delight, you'll meet Marlow's father, mother, sister and yes, even his devoted dog CoCo. In the end, the author makes certain that a lesson of always being thorough is realized, which causes Marlow to make learning a pleasure for all. Let's hope that the adventures of Marlow are just beginning with many more to come. A western style placed throughout this tale makes the book even more fun than many other children's books on the market today.

Ms. Johnson lives with her two children and husband in Indiana and has enjoyed children and writing all of her life. She has taught Sunday school and has enjoyed laughing and playing with creative thoughts for many years. Marlow is just an example of the many ideas she has decided to share with others.
